The municipality voted 1,000,600 pesetas for the expense of the festivities to take place during the months of the celebrations. Most of the cities of Spain will celebrate the event by local festivities; but the grandest display next to that of Madrid is to be at Huelva. The convent of La Ribida is being put back into the primitive condition in which it was when Columbus, in his humble pillgrim garb, Columbus, in his humble pilgrim garb, came to its door and begged the monks to give him a glass of water for his sick and wayworn son. The restoration is so complete that the Moorish marabout, about whose remains the edifice of modern con-struction was arrested, is laid open to view. The sixty meter column is progressing well. It is a very curious coincidence that the present mayor of Huelva is of the same name and a lineal descendant of the man who was mayor of the place when Columbus sailed forth to discover the New World. The two small caravels Pluta and Nina, to be built at the expense of the American government, will be ready before October. Among the most interesting of the maps to be shown, so far as America is con-cerned, is that of Juan de la Cosa, pilot or sailing master for Columbus, who went out with the latter on his voyage of dis-covery and accompanied him home, and again went out with him on his second voyage in 1463. Fac similes of this map are now being made by special permission of the Spanish government for distribution in the coming shows at Madrid.

MINES OF MUMMIES.

DIGGING FOR THE EMBALMED DEAD IS AN INDUSTRY IN PERU.

The Dry Soil of the Pacific Coast of South America Seems to Have Preserved in a Remarkable Degree the Remains of Inhabitants Buried Many Years Ago.

Just north of the Morro is a low line of verdure, modern built houses clustered in rows around a rather handsome church, and a long mole, the latter piled up with bags, bales and boxes, and crowded with soldiers, merchants and cargadores. This is Arica, a port of considerable consequence, because of being the outlet to Tacna and rich mines beyond, and the "key" to the still debatable territory. Notwithstanding its mole, steamers must anchor away out in the hay and passengers he rowed ashore in the bay and passengers be rowed ashore in canoes. However, they no longer have to be carried through the surf on the backs of men, as during the Peruvian regime, for the port has quite changed her complexion since claimed by Chili.

But that which brought us here has nothing to do with the fitful governments of these burlesque republics, and has re-mained unchanged through many centuries. Behind the town a great windrow of yellow sand sweeps back from the Morro, forming a kind of ampitheater, unrelieved by tree or shrub or blade of grass. This ridge, and all the desert for miles beyond, is a vast burial ground, which must once have been of my broader agrees. have been of much greater extent, for it is known that during the last hundred years the ocean has made considerable inroads A few years ago, when workmen were dig-ging up the sand to fill Africa's pier, and opening a track for the railroad that leads to Tacna (the important city of the district, forty miles inland), they found mummies everywhere; not only humble fishermen wrapped in their nets, and lowly tillers of the shriveled bodies of chiefs and other personages of consequence, enveloped in fine cloth and thin layers of beaten gold.

These aristocrats of a bygone age fared worse than their brother plebeians, for, while the latter were left comparatively undisturbed, los Rices, now grim and ghastly as the poorest, were stripped by rude hands and their crumbling bones tossed uncovered by the wayside. Our party went mummy hunting on horseback, striking straight across the desert to a point about five miles south of Africa. We were accompanied by several peones (laborers) and a suitable escort, for it is con-sidered unsafe for strangers to go out unattended, as highwaymen are abroad in the land and the poones might be tempted to make new mummies if anything of value were unearthed. However, people bent on such blood curdling errands as disturbing the dead are not likely to hunt alone, but naturally prefer company to keep their spirits up.

Dig anywhere and you cannot go amiss of a grave. The spades of other inquisi tive persons have scratched the desert here and there, but the great bulk of it is en-LONDON, June 16.—A deputation from the Loudon trade council today waited on Mr. Gladstone to gain from him an expression on the question of establishing a leval Shour day. Modern science cannot comprehend how these eyes were preserved; the commonly accepted theory is that they were never the visual organs of human beings, but th of cuttlefish, with which the more perishable optics of the subjects to be mummi-fied were replaced. Washington and His Mother. Shortly after the surrender of Cornwallia, Washington left Yorktown with a brilliant suite of French and American officers, and started upon his journey to Philadelphia, stopping on the way at Fredericksburg to visit his mother. It was nearly seven years since he had last seen her face; he left Mount Vernon in May, 1775, and did not return till the autumn of 1781. Now that the time of meeting drew near, his mother was serene but very quiet, only smiling to herself oftener than usual. But it was not the hero crowned that filled her thoughts, but the son who, after years of absence and danger, was coming back to of Fredericksburg was all aglow with joy and revelry. Washington, "in the midst of his numerous and brilliant suite," wrote Mr. Custis, "sent to apprise his mother of his arrival and to know when it would be her pleasure to receive him. Alone and on foot, the general in chief of the com-bined armies of France and America," he goes on to say in the grandiloquent style of the day, "the deliverer of his country, the hero of the hour, repaired to pay his bumble tribute of duty to her whom he enerated as the author of his being," etc. When the warm embrace of greeting was over, looking into his face with earnest, close observance, her eyes enkindled with maternal love, she said tenderly: "You are growing old, George; care and toll have been making marks in your face since I saw it last." Her voice is said to have been singularly sweet, and he loved its cadence as she called him by name. She inquired as to his health, and she spoke much of "old times and old frends, but of his glory not one word."-Mrs. Ella Ba sett Washington in Century.

A manufacturer of shoes a few days ago remarked, in speaking of his business: "Few people indeed know what they wear, when it comes to shoes. I mean the mate Take the cork sole pad, for instance The thick piece of material between the sole and upper is not cork, as many people suppose. It is a twisted twine or cloth covered with leather. What little cork is inside the shoes lies between the sole and insele, and it is no great protection from dampness. The cork is so porous and so thin that it will not keep out much dampness, but the people have got the general idea that they are good things and so buy them. That is a point for the manufact turer and he works up to it. The popular fancy must be catered to, and that is the reason a man is sent over the country to get ideas. Like all primitive peoples, the Mosris are very inquisitive, and in the manner of of the same metal depending upon the children are inclined to bring everything breast. the early days a party of Maoris came across some bars of soap which had been washed ashore from a wreck. Finding that the stuff was too sticky to be enten raw, they resolved to cook it. Accordingly they cut it up into small pieces and sprinkled these pieces over the sweet potatoes and fish which formed their evening meal. Finally they covered the whole mass over with fern leaves and mats, and, putting earth on the top, left everything to bake quietly in the ovens till evening. The scene at the evening meal must have been very funny. Not only did the tribe have to go supperless to bed, but the whole set of ovens were spoiled and new ones had to be constructed before any further cooking could be done. -All the Year Round.
